Joyce,

I think Newman had a few conflicts because we were able to work in the clean feel for a few weeks and did not have an active exclusion zone. Once we put the exclusion zone back in place, that is when we had the conflicts. They have been fine the past several days without any incidents to report. I do not expect future issues since the exclusion zone will be in effect until we are done with underground work.

The contaminated backfill material will be removed this week. It was just one batch of contaminated backfill, we needed a specific type of sandy soil to backfill in a tight location, that is why this different material was brought in.

Thanks,

Hi Mike - Thank you very much for the reports. I am surprised that Newman had some episodes of not respecting the exclusion zone since the project has been underway for several weeks. Have they continued to have issues?

Also, was the contaminated backfill material removed yet? I'm glad you had the foresight to sample it. Do you think it was just one batch of contaminated backfill?

Thanks!
